Theatre Program Brings Back On Dragonfly Wings

July 10, 2009

The Georgia Southern University Theatre program will be bringing back the hit production from their 2007-2008 Season On Dragonfly Wings Sept. 2nd-6th at the Performing Arts Center.

On Dragonfly Wings is the story of a young dragonfly nymph named Daisy. When the pond where she lives is threatened, Daisy comes up with a plan to save it. But just as her plan is put into action, she begins the transformation into a dragonfly, forcing her to leave the pond forever.

"Daisy Dragonfly is a young, yet daring girl with a beautiful heart. She always looks for the good in others and her sweet spirit radiates in all she says and does," said Annelise Kitching, who will be portraying Daisy.

Georgia Southern's Theatre and Performance first produced On Dragonfly Wings in the spring of 2008 in the Black Box Theatre. Since the response was so overwhelming, they have brought it back for a second run. The larger venue of the Performing Arts Center will allow the cast to expand the scope of their production.

"The set will be larger, more detailed, and there will be a new surprise that I won't spoil for our audience," Kitching said. "It is sure to be a fabulous production and I encourage all theatre goers, musical lovers, and anyone who enjoys a celebration of life."
